Interest and appreciation of historical graffiti is growing nationally and internationally. These enigmatic marks, previously overlooked and ignored by archaeologists and historians, are now being studied in depth, and are providing many new insights into the past. The Hampshire Medieval Graffiti Project continues to gain momentum, recording and interpreting these finds across the county. Our remit has expanded to cover not just churches but other historical buildings, and our discoveries are revealing a fascinating range of stories previously untold. This talk will demonstrate the range of our findings, including those made by the Southampton Archaeology Society graffiti team.
